

A BOUTIQUE PRACTICE JUST FOR YOUR NOSE

When an acute sinus problem is refusing to give up its hold on you, an endoscopic procedure using minimally invasive microinstruments can restore the natural drainage of your sinuses.

Garrett Bennett, MD
Double Board Certified
Sinus and Nasal Surgery

Headache. Nasal discharge. Trouble sleeping. Low energy. Puffy face. Tired of antibiotics. The effects on quality of life that an ongoing sinus problem can have are well known to those who suffer from one. Double-board-certified surgeon Dr. Garrett Bennett has dedicated his practice to bringing relief to patients and helping them breathe easier again.

“Sinuses are tiny passages in your head that help to warm, humidify, and purify the air you breathe. These passages can become blocked by dust, allergies, a cold, or a deviated nasal septum,” explains Dr. Bennett. “When they do, you can get a sinus infection, and it may become chronic. Conservative medical treatment often brings results, but when it doesn’t, consider a state-of-the-art surgical procedure that can limit or decrease the severity of your sinusitis.”

Return to a Rested and Healthy Look

In Dr. Bennett’s skilled hands, sinus surgery is performed using stereotactic image guidance and microinstrumentation that is far gentler on the patient than procedures of the past.

“All I do is noses, so I have honed my skills with the intent of making sinus surgery as comfortable and quickly healing as possible,” he says. “Patients are back to normal activities a week to ten days after their procedure.”

Because Dr. Bennett is not only a “nose specialist” but also a cosmetic surgeon, he brings his dual experience and expertise to every procedure.

His first and foremost concern is re-establishing the functionality of your nose and sinus passages. In addition, however, if that nose with a deviated septum also has a bump that you’ve always hated, he can address that as well.

You are the VIP

“Our philosophy is to give each patient VIP status and access to boutique, high-level services in an elegant atmosphere,” emphasizes Dr. Bennett.

“I am fortunate to have a staff of superstars when it comes to patient care. We want every patient to have an exceptional experience, and we go to extra lengths to make that happen.”

115 East 61st Street, Suite 7C
New York, NY 10065
212-980-2600

sinussurgeryprocedure.com

