Skin Cancer Experts

"One in five people will develop skin cancer in their lifetime, which is why it is vital to have regular skin screenings," says Dr. Antonio P. Cruz, renowned dermatologist and SkinPros practice founder. "Early detection saves lives. Not every skin cancer will require surgery, but for those that do, we can complete the procedure at the same facility where it was diagnosed."

Dr. Cruz is fellowship-trained in Mohs micrographic surgery, the only ultra-precise surgical intervention for skin cancer that ensures full tumor removal while preserving the maximum amount of healthy tissue. "We remove the visible tumor, then test thin layers of surrounding tissue in real time," he says. "This technique allows us to keep healthy skin and minimize scarring and cancer recurrence. Patients can walk in with cancer and walk out cancer-free."

Dr. Erik Domingues, a board-certified dermatologist at SkinPros who focuses on complex dermatology, concurs. "From treating a wart to decimating wrinkles to curing cancer through screening and surgery, our team can address all concerns and optimize an individualized treatment plan for each patient," he says.

Interventions done in-house include cryosurgery, electrodesiccation, curettage, and medicated creams. The practice also offers the very latest in cosmetic dermatology, so every patient can have healthy, beautiful skin. "We partner with our patients to manage their conditions, so their conditions don't manage them," says Mark Trott, a SkinPros physician assistant. "I educate patients about skin cancer prevention and all of our treatments, so they fully understand their options."

"There's one thing we want people to remember about skin cancer prevention," says Dr. Domingues. "The only healthy tan is the one you're born with."
