

Is It Time for Care at Home?

Visiting Nurse Service of New York—125 Years of Caring

What can you do when you're worried about what will happen when a loved one leaves the hospital, receives a complex diagnosis, or you notice concerning changes in their behavior? You may be scared, anxious, overwhelmed, and unsure of what to do next. The Visiting Nurse Service of New York (VNSNY) is there for you.

Whether you're looking for care for an elderly parent, assistance after surgery, or guidance when your spouse is diagnosed with a serious illness, VNSNY offers compassionate care—centered on your needs—right in the comfort of your own home.

Home Is Where the Care Is

Home. It's where you feel safe. And when you aren't feeling well, it's where you want to be—cared for by experts who can provide you with the medical care you need and who care about you as a person, not just a patient.

"Our registered nurses, rehabilitation therapists, and home health aides come to your home, with the goal of creating conditions in which you can take care of yourself—safely and comfortably," says Susan Northover, Senior Vice President of Patient Care Services at VNSNY.

If a loved one is facing an advanced illness, you can count on VNSNY Hospice and Palliative Care. A dedicated team of experts with specialized hospice training provide physical comfort and emotional support, so life can be lived as fully as possible along with friends and family.

And, if you want home care beyond what's covered by Medicare or traditional health insurance? Partners in Care, an affiliate of VNSNY, offers a suite of personalized services that can be paid for with either supplemental long-term care insurance or out of pocket.

Bringing the Care to You

Whether you've planned in advance for home care or you're facing a crisis and need an immediate solution, VNSNY brings the care to you. With more than 14,000 dedicated, compassionate professionals, VNSNY is ready to help when—and where—you need it most.

"Our nurse had a very special gift of caring."
