

My son Emmanuel is a special kid. He just enjoys every single thing in life. He's always saying "I have an idea!" and he sings all the time. I don't really see him as disabled. He just has some more challenges in his life. He has gone through occupational therapy at Hasbro Children's Hospital and now has a psychologist from Hasbro, too. But he's not the only one learning. He teaches me a lot. I used to be impatient. I want things done quick and right. But that's not Emmanuel. And that's OK, too.
