

Patient Patrons

If you ask the team at Hall & Wrye Plastic Surgeons and Aesthetic Treatment Centers, comprehensive training and individualized patient care remain essential for successful cosmetic and reconstructive procedures.

Co-founders Wesley Hall Jr., M.D. and Scott Wrye, M.D.

Recent data from the American Society of Plastic Surgeons shows that in 2023, over 18 million cosmetic procedures were performed in the U.S., reflecting continued demand. Yet patient concerns persist about safety and recovery time. Tracy Dufur, CEO of Nevada-based Hall & Wrye, emphasizes the critical importance of selecting qualified medical professionals. “With the aesthetic industry expanding rapidly, patients must research thoroughly to choose certified, experienced providers,” she says. “These are medical procedures requiring utmost seriousness.”

In an era where med spas proliferate and social media heavily features cosmetic treatments, this message is more relevant than ever. Hall & Wrye’s surgeons are board-certified experts, and their non-physician staff receive an average of $8,000 annually in advanced training to ensure patient safety and quality care. This dedication spans three main service areas: elective cosmetic surgeries—including breast, body, and facial enhancements; reconstructive surgeries such as breast and facial reconstruction; plus, med spa and hair restoration treatments.

Leading the team is Wesley Hall Jr., M.D., co-founder along with board-certified colleague Scott Wrye, M.D. Both graduated with honors at the top of their medical school classes. Dr. Hall’s passion for plastic surgery is rooted in both a family legacy of surgeons and his mother’s artistic influence, fostering the creativity critical to this field. “Physical changes can deeply impact self-esteem,” Dr. Hall explains. “Whether it’s helping a child recover from severe facial trauma or assisting someone reshaping their body postpartum, my goal is to enhance their confidence and quality of life.”

Personalized Practice

The board-certified surgeons and highly trained staff at Hall & Wrye prioritize direct, face-to-face communication to fully understand each patient’s goals and carefully review key aspects of their procedures—including recovery time and the choice between surgical or nonsurgical options to achieve the best outcomes.

At Hall & Wrye, exceptional training and personalized patient care form the foundation of every successful cosmetic or reconstructive treatment. “Building genuine relationships with our patients is central to our daily practice,” says Dr. Hall. “There’s no middleman involved, which is truly how medicine should be practiced.”

Hall & Wrye’s commitment to outstanding care extends to adopting proven technologies and techniques that deliver real results, even if that means favoring trusted, time-tested methods over flashy marketing trends.

“The aesthetic field evolves quickly, but we remain grounded in our core values,” explains Dufur. “Whether it’s educating our patients or serving the underserved in our community, our focus is on caring for people first.”
