

WOMEN'S HEALTH CARE REFINED

A classic approach to patient care and forward-thinking services set Long Island Women's Health Care Group apart.

Left to right: Ella Uvadyeva, M.D., FACOG; Scott Nodelman, M.D., FACOG; Lydia Valderrama, M.D., FACOG; Jessica Ventimiglia, M.D., FACOG; Paul Husserl, M.D., CLT, FACOG; and Gary Levine, M.D., FACOG, FACS.

Long Island Women's Health Care Group is a private practice, not owned by a hospital or insurance corporation, and that is hard to find.

The practice has evolved, and its physicians are now delivering babies of the babies they delivered. They take care of women their entire lives, and it comes full circle with new generations.

A woman seeing the same OB-GYN through her reproductive years and into menopause has the great advantage of continuity of care. Today, Long Island Women's Health Care Group continues forward on the same model of autonomy that has defined its approach to care from the beginning. The group has offices in Mineola and Syosset and admitting privileges at NYU Langone Hospital—Long Island. Its six doctors offer diversity and expertise—including bilingual providers and lifetime achievement award winners—and they work collaboratively to provide compassionate obstetric and gynecologic care.

Everyone is a patient of the practice, benefitting from the doctors' combined knowledge. Desiring for each patient to always feel comfortable and confident, the practice encourages all maternity patients to see every physician for an enhanced experience.

Personalizing the Patient Experience

The professionalism of its long-term staff, one-on-one care, and content patients of the practice are the reasons Long Island Women's Health Care Group retains multigenerational patients.

The practice's emphasis on consistent, quality care and drive for continuing education contribute to its concierge-like service. Diagnostic and in-office surgical procedures can be done on-site, including the O-Shot® (a platelet-rich plasma injection that rejuvenates vaginal tissue) and laser hair removal—a service that, while not typical of a women's health group, puts patients at ease because of the practice's familiar and safe setting.

Through its longevity, Long Island Women's Health Care Group has kept abreast of emerging concerns and health trends. Recently, the practice is seeing a resurgence of interest in childbirth classes with a movement away from elected cesarean sections and back to natural births. Whether visiting the group for the first time, preparing for motherhood, or navigating symptoms of menopause, through every stage in a patient's life, the practice strives to help patients maintain a healthy lifestyle.

"We have always been there for our patients and will continue to be in the future. There's a sense of ownership and pride in what we do."

Long Island
WOMEN'S Health Care Group
OBSTETRICS & GYNECOLOGY

173 Mineola Boulevard
Suite 200
Mineola, NY 11501
516-741-4321

175 Jericho Turnpike
Suite 303
Syosset, NY 11791
516-364-8780

liwhealthcare.com