

Getting Closer to Paradise

When it comes time to choose a retirement destination, you're likely to remember a place that took your breath away. It's a very important step, and you want to end up somewhere that will maximize your chances to fully enjoy your retirement. A place like Southwest Florida, the Paradise Coast, with its deep orange sunsets, beautiful weather, and palm trees that flank long winding roads, has a quiet but busy, small city charm. This is about as close to paradise as you can get, but with one more great choice, you can get a lot closer. There is a way to have your sunset and watch it too. For years, seniors have been relocating to the Southwest Florida community, seeking a seamless, easy-going retirement lifestyle. Southwest Florida is answering the call for premium resort-style senior care and meeting the needs of retired seniors while allowing them to keep all the joy that drew them to this area to begin with. This step beyond retirement is improving their quality of life and giving them the most out of their golden years with incredible support, carefully curated amenities, and expert care.

Many senior communities have adopted a resort-style living that not only offers excellent care but also excellent features and amenities, like dining experiences that feature professionally trained chefs who curate gourmet restaurant-style culinary experiences. Most resort-style communities come fully equipped for a quality stay complete with a pool, a bar, a movie theater, and fully equipped apartment-homes. Stay healthy, active, and fully supported with smart gyms built with seniors in mind with technology and staff curated for optimal support.

For those that may require an extra helping hand, assisted living options allow seniors to maintain an enhanced quality of life by providing assistance where it is most needed. Lastly, memory care programs follow state-of-the-art treatment guidelines to maintain cognitive functionality. Senior living as an industry, understands the needs of aging adults and, paired with the beauty of Southwest Florida, creates the perfect post-retirement lifestyle. Get closer to paradise. You have spent your entire life earning this sunset, so you should spend your entire retirement enjoying it.

Maybe life after retirement isn't what you expected so far, and you can't quite name why. More and more you find yourself calling your children for help and not simply for company. Lately they have been your personal assistant, your caretaker, your emergency contact, your groundskeeper, and your first responder. Or maybe you do your own chores, and keeping up with them has been tough lately. Lastly, there is a chance you have been feeling distant and disconnected from old friends, and you haven't been able to find a community that shares your interests and values. Paradise shouldn't have so many complications. It's time to replace a day of to-dos with a day of memories and adventures. It's time to reconnect with your children in a way that allows them to play their most important role—family. It's time to live, love, and laugh with people your own age.

Allow a senior living community to take you that much closer to paradise.
