INFLUENTIAL WOMEN OF ST. LOUIS

Anne Marie Boedges, President and Principal Designer of Anne Marie Design Studio, believes a home should be a retreat - beautiful, functional, and filled with moments that matter. “We envision essential, meaningful spaces alongside our clients,” she says. “From kitchens to bathrooms and everything in between, we design and renovate from floor to ceiling.”

Her Wildwood-based studio, creatively renovated from the former Wildwood police station, brings together designers, project coordinators, cabinetry specialists, and senior craftsmen.

“When you work with us, you gain the expertise of our entire team. We truly live and breathe your process.”

Each project begins with a personal consultation discussing goals, lifestyle, timeline, and budget. Anne Marie encourages clients to visualize their lives five to ten years ahead – considering travel, entertaining, and family changes – to ensure the space evolves with them. After in-home measurements, the team hand-draws plans, selects products, and builds their signature designer binder. Cabinetry is treated as the “black dress” of the home, enhanced with custom “jewelry” to create timeless character.

Final designs are modeled digitally and explored through groundbreaking Oculus VR technology, allowing clients to walk through their future space. As a full design-build firm, they manage bids, subcontractors, and construction, with most renovations taking about four months once underway.

Clients can visit the studio showroom in Wildwood, and catch Anne Marie sharing design insight on Fox 2 News and the BIG550 KTRS radio.
